Standley Assumes Head of TRA's Telecommunications Division

Nashville, Tennessee – Darlene Standley, deputy chief of the Tennessee Regulatory Authority's (TRA) Telecommunications Division, has been promoted to the position of chief of the Division. The announcement was made by TRA Chairman Pat Miller.

A certified public accountant, Standley received a B.B.A. degree from Middle Tennessee State University and is a 16-year employee of the state and an 8-year employee of the TRA.

"Darlene's telecommunications experience has been and will continue to be very valuable to this agency," said Chairman Miller. "We are very pleased to have someone of Darlene's ability to serve as chief the Division."

Standley is native of Nashville and resides in Smyrna. She is married to David Standley and has two sons.
